Arany János Program
Level	Country level
Country	Hungary
Institutions involved	KMTA
Description	The program deals with embracing disadvantaged or cumulatively disadvantaged students and gets them to higher education institutions. By the state special attention is given to the disadvantaged in vocational schools.
Main Results	It turned out that the Arany János Program is so successful that showed that the highly selective and socially equal non-supportive school system is also able to create opportunities for a few thousand people. The program mostly only made an impact for the immediate environment (participants). The students went through a socialization different from a family socialization and gain knowledge that gives them a better chance in their life and in the labor market. In addition, in high schools and colleges the attitude of teachers also changed: on one hand, their opinion changed about disadvantaged children to a more positive one, and on the other hand, their pedagogical culture was also enriched, which can be used elsewhere.
